FOREWARD

India is endowed with Agro-climatic conditions best suited for the production of variety of fruits. The Southern States of the Country namely, Karnataka, Kerala, Tamilnadue and Andhrapradesh are the major growing areas for Banana. These regions have varying agro ecological and socio-economic conditions resultantly different systems of cultivations and cultivar's. A large number of cultivar's totalling about 70 are grown in different parts of the country. In Karnataka Dwarf Cavendish, Robusta and Elakkibale are grown commercially owing to high yield wide market acceptability, short crop duration and high economic returns per unit area. Elakkibale and Poovan is also grown commercially in many parts of the country. Rasbale is also grown in different regions of Karnataka State is significant in commercial production and its success largely depends on higher price it fetches. Nendran or Raieli is grown in Kerala and Tamilnadu.

The area under the Banana is with an extent of 45,455 hectares in Karnataka State. There is a high demand for disease free plants of the Banana. For faster multiplication of disease free plants, ambitious programme has been launched by the department of Horticulture to meet the growing demand by adopting invitro propagation of the Banana at Departmental Laboratory in Lalbagh. There is a tremendous response from the farmer's for Tissue cultured plants.

Total production of the Banana in the country is 10.4 million tons in an area of 3.9 Lakh hectares, which stands number one fruit crops with respect to production and contribute 30% of the total fruit production. India is the largest producer of Banana. Percent contribution of different states to the total production of Banana is Karnataka 13.79, Tamilnadu 17.63, Andhrapradesh 6.08 and Kerala 3.33 and percent contribution of different states to the total area under Banana is, Karnataka 10.77, Tamilnadu 14.81, Andhrapradesh 8.79 and Kerala 5.76.

In this booklet efforts have been made to afford an opportunity to the Banana growers of the Southern States to participate and to display on their varieties for the general interest and benefits of the Southern States & the Banana growers who visits this Show. The proposed show is also mainly aimed at encouraging the Banana growers to develop the spirit of competition in raising this nutritious crop. The Department and the Society have also taken much interest in arranging Group discussion of the farmers with the Experts on Banana to suggest suitable remedies for the problems being faced by them in the field.

I am confident that this Booklet will be of use to all the Banana Growers and others who participate in the Banana Show and the Seminar.
