

What Thinkers say:

- Gorman (1998) - "Librarian's job" is to preserve forms of recorded knowledge, foster public education and continue a historical mission that provides a foundation for democratic society.
- Todd (Todd, Henri and Rowen, 1996)- Librarians may be involved in curriculum development, training of staff members and student learning and welfare and thus the position should be elevated to that equivalent to a Leading Faculty in a college setting, or an Executive Teacher in a University.
